BETHESDA HEALTH CARE WELCOMES NEW BOARD MEMBER

Bethesda Health Care, a Claremont based private hospital, has recently welcomed Leanne Milligan as the newest member of their board of directors.

Leanne joins the Bethesda Health Care, after a 25 year career at St John of God (SJOG) Health Care, with her most recent position being Director of Corporate Services, and Strategy Planning at SJOG Murdoch.

She is a senior executive who has led strategic, specialist and operational functions in profit-for-purpose and corporate settings. This has involved strategic planning, major project and asset management, change management, service delivery, business development, contract management, risk and compliance, financial performance review and management, property management, corporate governance, and corporate services.

With qualifications in Accounting, Law and Business, and a graduate diploma from AICD, Leanne is an experienced non-executive director with board roles in both not-for-profit organisations and corporate businesses.

She joins fellow board members Tri Suseno, Dominic Burke, and Yasmin Naglazas, led by Chairman Dr Neale Fong.

Bethesda Health Care CEO Ms Yasmin Naglazas said 'this year two of our long standing board members, Dr Alister Turner (20 years) and Ric Leaver (12 years) are standing down. Their input and guidance has been invaluable, and we thank them for their dedication. Leanne's appointment follows on from a successful year by Bethesda Health Care, and it is an important time when the organisation is poised for future expansion, examining options other than its Claremont site'.

Bethesda Health Care is an independent 88-bed award-winning hospital in Claremont who has been providing care and service to the Western Australian community for more than 70 years.
